 - (1) in forfeiture under sections 5(2), 8 or 14(2) - the person claiming a right to the property has proved his right to the property;

other person with respect to temporary management of the property (hereinafter referred to in this Law as “the temporary order”). In this Chapter, “court” means the District Court in which the indictment or the application for forfeiture in civil proceedings has been filed, as the case may be.

Grant of temporary remedy prior to filing indictment

23. (a) The court may make a temporary order under the provisions of this Chapter even prior to the filing of an indictment or an application for forfeiture in civil proceedings, as the case may be, upon the application of a District Attorney, if it has been duly satisfied that there are reasonable grounds to believe that the property with respect to which the order is requested is likely to disappear or that actions are likely to be done with such property preventing the realization of the forfeiture.
 - (b) A temporary order made prior to the filing of an indictment or prior to filing of an application for forfeiture in civil proceedings, as the case may be, shall lapse if the indictment or the application are not filed within six months from the day the order was given; the court may extend this period for additional periods not exceeding three months, provided that the total period does not exceed one year from the day the order was given.

Ex parte temporary order

24. The court may make an ex parte temporary order under this Chapter, where it has reason to suspect that something will be done immediately to the property to frustrate its forfeiture; the validity of a temporary order given ex parte shall not exceed ten days and the application shall be heard in the presence of both parties as soon as possible and within the duration of validity of the order; the court may, on grounds to be recorded, extend the validity of a temporary order made ex parte for additional periods, provided that the total period does not exceed thirty days from the day the order was given.

Application of provisions on the right of argument and restrictions on the forfeiture of property

25. In a hearing on the application for grant of a temporary order under the provisions of this Chapter, except for an application for an ex parte order under section 24, the provisions of section 11 and the provisions of sections 18 and 19 shall apply, mutatis mutandis.

Grant of temporary order to the extent not exceeding what is required

26. Where the court has decided to make a temporary order under this Chapter, it shall determine the class, scope, conditions and duration of the order, all to an extent not exceeding what is required to realize the objects of the temporary order.

- (b) An application to amend or cancel a forfeiture order shall be filed within two years from the day the forfeiture order was given, or within a later time to be determined by the court, if it deems it just to do so.
- (c) Where the court has amended or canceled a forfeiture order, it shall order the return of all or part of the property to the applicant, or reimbursement from the State treasury to the applicant where it is impossible to return the property, or the applicant has agreed to receive the proceeds thereof; where the court has ordered the payment of the proceeds of the property, it shall determine in the order the amount of the payment according to the free market value of the property on the day the forfeiture order was given, or on the day the payment order was given, according to the higher of the two; the payment order or the order for the return of the property shall be given no later than three months from the day on which the court decided to cancel the forfeiture order.
- (d) Where the court has amended or canceled a forfeiture order, it may order that any person injured on account of the order shall be compensated from the State treasury.

- (e) An order for the return of property or a payment order shall be implemented as soon as possible, and no later than sixty days from the day on which they were given.

Reconsideration of temporary order

- 29. The court may reconsider a temporary order it has given, if it deems it justified to do so because of changed circumstances or new facts discovered after the temporary order was given.

Appeal

- 30. A decision on the grant, amendment or cancellation of a forfeiture order under this Law and any decision within a hearing on the application for the grant of a temporary order shall be appealable to the Supreme Court within 30 days from the day on which the appellant is notified of the making of the decision, in the same manner as an appeal is made on a decision in a civil matter; however, if a decision is made in a sentence and an appeal is filed on the judgment, the Supreme Court may also hear the appeal relating to the forfeiture order; an appeal on a decision concerning a temporary order shall be heard by a single judge.
